The mission of the Division of Special Revenue is to ensure the highest degree of integrity in the conduct of all forms of legalized gaming within the State of Connecticut and the Federally recognized Tribal Nations within the State. We accomplish our mission by licensing or permitting all individuals and entities that are involved with legalized gambling and by monitoring and educating to ensure compliance with the gaming laws and the Tribal-State agreements. We ensure public confidence in the honesty and fairness of all facets of gambling for the highest quality benefit to the State.

HISTORY AND DESCRIPTION OF THE DIVISION OF SPECIAL REVENUE

The Division of Special Revenue is the Connecticut State Agency responsible for regulating legal gaming. Established as the Commission on Special Revenue, pursuant to Public Act 865 of the 1971 session of the General Assembly, the Agency became the Division of Special Revenue following executive reorganization effective July 1, 1979. Since its inception, the Agency has provided the operational and regulatory framework for each form of authorized gaming and has acted so as to ensure the highest levels of integrity for the activities which have returned $691,340,023 to the State General Fund during fiscal year 2003-2004.

Headed by an Executive Director, appointed by the governor, the Division works cooperatively with the five-member State Gaming Policy Board, also appointed by the Governor, to implement and administer the statutory provisions governing legal gaming, contained in Chapters 54, 98, 226, 226b, 226c and 229a of the Connecticut General Statutes.

Current activities subject to Division oversight include the games of the Connecticut Lottery operated by the quasi-public Connecticut Lottery Corporation, greyhound racing conducted by Connecticut Yankee Greyhound Racing, Inc., at Plainfield, and the Shoreline Star Greyhound Park and Entertainment Complex, LLC at Bridgeport, and the statewide off-track betting operated by Autotote Enterprises. In addition, the charitable gaming activities of bingo, sealed ticket sales, bazaars, and raffles, conducted by nonprofit organizations, are subject to registration, permit, and regulatory requirements of the Division.

Pursuant to Tribal-State agreements, the Division also licenses the gaming related workers and registers the gaming service enterprises of the Foxwoods Resort Casino, in Mashantucket, operated by the Mashantucket Pequot Tribe, and the Mohegan Sun, in Montville, operated by the Mohegan Tribe. The Division also participates in oversight of the Tribal slot and/or video facsimile machine activity.

STATUTORY RESPONSIBILITY

Pursuant to the provisions of Chapters 54, 98, 226, 226b, 226c, and 229a of the Connecticut General Statutes, the Division of Special Revenue regulates the State's legalized gaming activities, ensuring compliance with current statutes and regulations, assures gaming integrity, and licenses individuals and entities involved in legalized gambling. The Division affords all individuals and entities entitled to a compliance meeting or hearing due process through a fair and objective forum. All parties are provided the opportunity to present evidence and testimony addressing statutory and regulatory violations, to determine suitability of applicants, licensees, permittees, and patrons, resulting in a fair and reasonable determination of the matter.

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION

The Division of Special Revenue operated under an Affirmative Action Plan approved by the Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities on April 8, 2004. The Division's Affirmative Action Contract Compliance Officer is LeRoy Watson. In fiscal year 2003-2004, the Division did not knowingly do business with any bidder, contractor, sub-contractor, supplier of materials, or licensee who discriminates against members of any class protected under Connecticut General Statutes Sec. 4-114(a).

GAMING POLICY BOARD

Under the provisions of Connecticut General Statutes Sec. 12-557(c), the Gaming Policy Board works in cooperation with the Division of Special Revenue to implement and administer the statutory and regulatory provisions governing legalized gambling. Although the Board and the Division work cooperatively on many matters, the Board has certain statutory authority beyond the scope of the Division. In general, the Division oversees day-to-day activities in regulation, licensing, and integrity assurance matters related to gaming, and the Board addresses issues of longer-range policy development.

Members of the Gaming Policy Board during the 2003-2004 fiscal year were: Nelson C. L. Brown of Glastonbury, Chairman, (served on the Board 1989-1993, and since 1995), Gilbert Lebovitz of Rocky Hill, (served on the Board since 1993), William Farrell of Madison, (served on the Board since 1997), Richard Antonetti of Meriden, (served on the Board since 1999), William LaVelle of Hamden, (served on the Board since 1999).

PUBLIC SERVICE

Regulation:

The Division of Special Revenue regulates Connecticut's authorized forms of gambling, Tribal Casino gambling, pari-mutuel wagering, State Lottery ticket sales, and Charitable Games.

Licensing:

The Division of Special Revenue licenses, registers, or permits individuals, organizations, and vendors to be employed by, or contracted with gaming licensees or permittees within the State, and those businesses authorized to sell Lottery tickets. The Division assures that only suitable individuals work within the gaming industry in Connecticut. Each and every person working in any capacity involving gambling is licensed by the Division. This also applies to corporations, businesses and other entities involved in the industry. There are over 19,952 active licenses currently in Connecticut's gaming industry. Upon initial application, license applicants are investigated for criminal and financial history, and again upon each renewal. The licensing process includes security background checks coordinated by the Division and conducted by internal Division staff, State Police personnel, and Federal law enforcement agencies.

Administrative Hearings:

The Division provides due process and an opportunity to be heard to those individuals or entities denied initial licensure or whose current license is in the process of being revoked, pursuant to the Uniform Administrative Procedures Act.

Ensuring compliance with law:

The Division ensures compliance with statutes, regulations, and procedures. In general, this is accomplished by maintaining on-site coverage to ensure statutory compliance, to be available and responsive to patron inquiries, and by research and investigative work. The Division is a law enforcement agency, and does have staff members with police powers.

Ensuring the integrity of games (fair chance to win):

The Division tests wagering systems and related equipment to ensure the integrity of the games. The functional foundation that allows legalized gambling to exist and flourish is integrity assurance. The Connecticut public must not be exposed to gaming without a reasonable assurance that the games are operated fairly, and that every patron has a fair chance to win. The public's interest is served only when gaming is conducted in an honest fashion. The Division conducts both field investigations and central office investigations, and monitors operations to assure that all gambling activities are consistently conducted in a fair and honest manner, and to detect and prevent any type of fraudulent activity in gaming.

Auditing/monitoring:

The Division conducts annual independent audits to ensure operations are compliant with statutory and regulatory requirements. In addition, the Division collects pari-mutuel and regulation fees, and pays grants to municipalities.

Education:

- The Charitable Games Unit conducted instructional meetings with bingo, sealed ticket, bazaar and raffle permittees to ensure that the events run by those organizations were operated according to the law.
- The Charitable Games Unit communicated with its permittees regarding 10 new bazaar games that charitable organizations could use to recoup revenue lost due to not being able to use money wheels or Las Vegas Nights as fundraisers.
- Division auditors and accountants spoke to a graduate level accounting class at Eastern Connecticut State University. They discussed the role of auditors and accountants in the regulation of legalized gaming in Connecticut.
- Auditors from the Casino Accounting Section met with officials from the New York State Racing and Wagering Board to give the NYSRWB advice regarding auditing slot machines.

Support of programs to confront problems of chronic gambling:

The Division of Special Revenue supports treatment and rehabilitation for chronic gamblers through its public awareness activities, pursuant to Section 12-563(a) of the Connecticut General Statutes, which provides that the Division shall inform the public of the availability of treatment programs for chronic gamblers. The Division also insures that funding for such programs is available, pursuant to Section 17a-713(b) of the Connecticut General Statutes.

The Division is an active member of the Connecticut Committee for Problem Gambling Awareness. The committee prepares and distributes informational materials designed to inform the public of the programs available for the prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation of compulsive gamblers.

Security Services:

The Division's security services worked in fiscal year 2003-2004 to ensure public trust and confidence by:

- Conducting background investigations of licensees and vendors of the gaming industry.
- Reporting gambling infractions and, whenever warranted, prosecuting to the fullest extent of the law.
- Conducting lottery agent inspections to assure each agent is in compliance with regulations that enhance public confidence and trust in the sale of tickets.
